

Verdasys and MBSD Announce Strategic Partnership

Waltham, MA — March 30, 2005 — Verdasys, Inc., makers of Digital Guardian, the world's first point of use data security platform, and Mitsui Bussan Secure Directions, Inc. (MBSD), a subsidiary of Mitsui & Co., Ltd., today announced a strategic partnership for the sale of Digital Guardian enabled solutions in Japan.

"We are very pleased to be working with MBSD in delivering the most comprehensive data security solutions in the world to the Japanese market," said Seth Birnbaum, CEO of Verdasys. "We welcome MBSD's deep insight and broad reach in this space as we continue to provide the most economically compelling approach for the protection of information and compliance with data privacy and governance laws worldwide."

Japan's Private Information Protection Act is but one example of the growing global demand for the protection of sensitive information like private customer data. Digital Guardian's ability to comprehensively monitor and control information at the point of use, on desktops, laptops and servers, is unmatched in its ability to cost-effectively audit and protect critical information assets in today's dynamic and ever-changing global enterprise.

"We look forward to leveraging our strong experience in information security to support Verdasys in the Japanese market. Verdasys' unique platform and the solutions will be of great benefit to the system integrators and large customers in Japan who are eager to implement the best protection available for their data," said Kazu Nomura, President and CEO of MBSD.
