

Verdasys and Business-e (Itway Group) Announce Strategic Partnership to Expand Point of Use Security Solutions in Italy

Waltham, MA — April 4, 2006 — Verdasys, Inc., developers of Digital Guardian, the world's most comprehensive global data security platform, and Business-e, an Itway Group Company, of Ravenna, Italy today announced a strategic partnership that will include the joint marketing and resale of Digital Guardian enabled solutions in Italy.

Verdasys Digital Guardian is an effective and proven data security solution for protecting and tracking the flow of consumer information, intellectual property and other high value data anywhere in the world. Whether on PCs, laptops, or servers, inside or outside the organization, Verdasys Digital Guardian is there to monitor, log, and, if necessary, block prohibited actions by trusted end-users.

Business-e, a leader in security consulting, ICT security solutions and system integration, partners with other top-tier Italian integrators to deliver security solutions that support global business. Business-e's customers include Italy's dominant telecommunication, financial, and automotive companies who need to protect their business data including new product designs, customer and employee records, and/or financial data.

Richard Zoni, Business Manger ICT Security for Business-e realized this critical need for protection and immediately saw the value in Digital Guardian's unique ability to track and monitor information without disrupting existing business processes. "In today's globalized economy, one of the most dangerous threats faced by Italian enterprises is data leakage by authorized users," said Zoni. "Verdasys' Digital Guardian platform will be of great benefit to the large enterprises in Italy who are eager to implement the best possible protection available for their data".

"This strategic partnership with Business-e is a key step in the rapid expansion of Digital Guardian into the European market," said Stefan Gieseler, General Manager Europe for Verdasys. "Business-e is a respected leader in Italy, known for its ability to successfully implement innovative security solutions. We look forward to working with them in providing Digital Guardian based solutions to the Italian market."
